Amy Gorman and her son Philip get ready for the next performance at Kidstuff.

Kidstuff: theater for tots

By PENELOPE KRAMER

THOUSAND OAKS — Amy Gorman thinks young children should have a theater geared to their needs. Where they can sit on the floor, listen to songs and they understand and sing along when they feel like it.

That's why she's started "Kidstuff," a children's performance series for three- to eight-year-olds at Julia Mor-

There's surprisingly little entertainment around that age can go to and feel confident and not feel "rehearsed," Gorman said.

"It's off the ground," she said, "we'll develop a place in the Bay Area of people who want their children exposed to live entertainment and first-rate the-performances, which cost $1 for children and $2 for adults, will be held at 11 a.m. and noon the first and third Sunday of every month, at the theater at 2640 College Ave. in Berkeley.

Gorman says the fall season has been a great success so far, with sell-out crowds of more than 300 parents and children at each performance.

On Nov. 7 the Albany storytelling group, the Ninny-hammers will perform, and on Nov. 21 Kidstuff will feature children's folksinger Nancy Raven and creative dramatist Betty Halpern.

Performers scheduled for later this fall include folksinger Tom Hunter and trumpeter Michael Margolis, who imitates animal sounds on his trumpet.

There will also be a show by percussionist Keith Terry, who "creates sounds involving body rhythms," Gorman said, snapping her fingers and slapping her thighs.

Gorman said she chooses performers who get the

U.N. Day fete slated

EL CERRITO — Mayor Jean Siri's proclamation of next Sunday as "United Nations Day" gained added significance Monday with the announcement that the city's celebration of the historic occasion is being revived under new sponsorship.

The Baha'i Assembly of El Cerrito, through its leader, Tom Kilpatrick, announced at the City Council meeting that it is assuming sponsorship of the event to be held from 2 to 5 p.m. today at the El Cerrito Community Center, 7007 Mooser Lane.

Music and entertainment will precede the program featuring two guest speakers: Dr. Daniel Jordon, former director of the Institute for Research in Human Behavior at Indiana State University, and Carl Schmittauser, a member of the executive committee of the United Nations Assn. of Alameda.

"A United World: Dream or Destiny?" will be the theme of the event, which is open to the public.

Refreshments will be served.

Until last year, when it was discontinued, the United Nations Day program was for some two decades annually organized and chaired by local resident Sundar Shadi.

Shadi drew representatives of several nationalities to participate in the celebration in song, dance and other cultural forms.

Last year, however, he sought to turn the rigorous duties of coordinating the event over to other hands, but there were no takers.

Kilpatrick said the Baha'is are presenting the celebration "in the interest of furthering the cause of peace in the world."

Mayor Jean Siri said she "always has been proud about celebrating United Nations Day when Sundar Shadi is doing it for us." She welcomed the Baha'is gesture in restoring the tradition and urged all local citizens to be at the Community Center festivities.

More money woes for local schools

By PENELOPE KRAMER

ALBANY — Since Prop. 13 was passed, Albany school officials have not only had less money to spend on schools, they've had less say over how it's spent.

Superintendent Stephen Goldstone told the school board last Tuesday that since the property tax cut was passed in 1977, schools are getting more money from the state and less from local government.

"We all know that he who holds the purse strings is going to tell you how to spend the money," Goldstone said.

"In 1977-78 (when Prop. 13 was passed), the district's state income was $1,211,562 and the local income was $3,266,397."

"The next year that totally reversed itself," he said. "We got $3,153,280 from the state and $1,393,620 in local funds."

"This is a very dramatic shift," he said. "It has a significant influence on how the school is governed and who's going to have the control."

To make things worse, he said, the school board is required by law to bargain with local unions even though they have no say over how much state money they have to meet union demands.

Goldstone distributed a chart which showed that though inflation has been soaring each year since Prop. 13 passed, school income has either decreased, or increased too little to compensate for inflation.

School income is expected to decrease one percent in 1982-83.

"The result," he said, "is that in a period of ravaging inflation, we have received a total increase of only 13 percent (since 1977)."

Also, he said, under the Serrano-Priest decision, Albany has received even less of that increase than the rest of California because it is a relatively wealthy community.

The Serrano Priest decision re-

The 8th District race presents a real choice

Dellums vs. Reagan

By BILL WYMAN

U.S. Rep. Ronald Dellums, seeking his seventh term in office, prefers to look at his campaign as a referendum on the Reagan administration.

Rep. Ron Dellums

"The issue in this election," says Dellums, "is whether the candidate supports or rejects the policies that have dominated this country for the past 20 months."

Dellums well realizes that the Eighth Congressional District, which encompasses Berkeley and parts of Oakland, west and central Contra Costa County, is perhaps the most liberal in California.

Dellums was elected on an anti-Vietnam War platform 12 years ago, and since then has remained one of the most consistent opponents of military spending and Republican policies in the Congress.

Now, during his seventh election, the 46-year-old ex-manpower specialist is facing his toughest challenge yet: a well-funded Republican named Claude Hutchison from Lafayette.

The country has changed drastically during Dellums' tenure. The issues that served as a backdrop to his first campaign seem distant — the riots over People's Park, Weathermen bombings across the country, the investigation into the killings at Kent State, even a blistering attack on Dellums from Vice President Spiro Agnew, and a subsequent rejoinder from the candidate to the effect that Agnew was carrying out a policy of "genocide and political repression from coast to coast."

They were hardy times that conjure up a feeling of nostalgia, but they did produce the man who has since become one of the most influential politicians in the East Bay.

Since 1970, Dellums has helped bring to prominence Berkeley Mayor Gus Newport, Oakland City Councilman Wilson Riley, Jr., Supervisor John George, Assemblyman Tom Bates and the Berkeley Citizens Action faction in Berkeley politics.

Hutchison's challenge

By BILL WYMAN

Claude Hutchison says he is convinced that there is a coalition of Republicans, independents, and moderate Democrats who want a change in the Eighth Congressional District.

Hutchison, a 44-year-old ex-president of Security National Bank, is so sure of this that he is taking on the improbable: a race against Ronald Dellums, the six-term representative of the solidly Democratic district, which encompasses Berkeley, East Oakland and certain portions of West Contra Costa County.

As a moderate Republican, Hutchison says, he can successfully challenge Dellums' long hold on the district.

Hutchison can boast this year of the formation of the Democrats for Hutchison, led by Berkeley City Council member Leo Bach and BART Director Art Shartsis.

"Hutchison stands for all the things I've been fighting for," Bach says. "He's for jobs and is a fighter for attracting business."

In such a heavily Democratic district — the district has 203,000 registered Democrats and only 83,000 registered Republicans — moderate is the key word for Hutchison. So the word "moderate" occurs in his conversation regularly — just as, presumably for a similar reason, he did not mention President Reagan by name once in a 90-minute interview.

But he is not coy about his party affiliation.

"The president is a Republican, I'm a Republican," Hutchison says. "On the vast majority of issues we'll be in agreement."

He says he differs from the president on a number of issues. "The size of the deficit troubles me," he says. "If we allow a deficit of such magnitude, it's likely to drive interest rates back up and rekindle inflation."

Still, Hutchison says, "the president deserves an enormous amount of credit for bringing inflation down thus far." Interest rates, he predicts, will soon follow, and he quired that the state try to make sure the same amount of money is spent on all California students, no matter where they live. To help achieve this, the state sends more money to "low wealth districts" and less money to "high wealth districts."

Goldstone said the district usually plans its budget to insure there is money left over at the end of the year. This extra money has helped the schools get through the post-Prop. 13 crisis.

But this year, he said, Albany schools will spend more than their income.

In other business, the board:

- Approved a three percent raise for the school service employees.

- Gave citations to retiring teacher Betty Mohler who taught English and history at Albany Middle School for 13 years, and Jim Walker, who was principal of Albany High School for 12 years to thank them for their service.

- Heard a presentation about the new YMCA before/after school program at Marin School. The day care program, which starts at 7:30 a.m., is being held at Marin school for the first time.

Board member Kay Rabin said the board was pleased with the new morning program, because "we all know there are many children home at 7:30 and 8 o'clock in the morning with virtually no supervision who are letting themselves out the door."

- Approved the new wording of the Albany Middle School School Improvement Plan. The first plan written by middle school principal Bob Shogren and vice principal Linda Henderson was rejected by the state.

The state requires such plans to be written in one of three formats or "options." The first middle school plan was written according to the most creative format — "The one that's called the 'You Do It.'" Shogren said, "which means you can use a more creative approach."

"When we sent it off to Sacramento it was read by one person who didn't like it one bit," he said. "He wanted it written in a rather set way."

"We have gone back to option one," he said. "It's not as useful to the school, but perhaps it's more useful to them."

"The SIP program is aimed towards being creative and the middle school came up with something creative," she said. "I hoped the other schools would follow suit."

Shogren said that "at this point, we've learned our lesson — we'll just stick with old tried and true."

heralded the recent stock market surge as an "economic turnaround" — a term President Reagan's economic advisers have been reluctant to use.

Hutchison says he received a commitment from the National Republican Congressional Committee to assist in his campaign. So far the committee has contributed $9000 — $5000 of this in the primary — and will provide matching funds of $18,000 for a mailer before the election, he says.

Hutchison says that as of Sept. 30 his committee had collected $263,000 and had spent $253,000 of that.

His election strategy has brought charges of "red-baiting" from the Dellums camp. One mailer paints Dellums as pro-Soviet; another says, "One word describes Congressman Ron Dellums...ineffective."

Hutchison's only previous elected office was on the Lafayette School Board. He grew up in Berkeley (his father, the late Claude Sr., was the city's mayor from 1955 to 1963) and he received a bachelor's degree in business from UC-Berkeley and later an MBA from Harvard.

He began work as a financial analyst for Security National Bank in 1965 and recently retired as its president.

Hutchison is an active member of the UC-Berkeley Alumni Association, currently president of the Friends of the Cal Crew Association, and says his leisure time is spent skiing and relaxing with his family.

"I'm convinced the philosophy of Ron Dellums is not now representative of the mainstream of thinking in Berkeley," he said.

On the issues, Hutchison emerges as a Gerald Fordish moderate, unhappy with the liberal policies of the last few decades.

"For the past 28 years," Hutchison says, "the House has been controlled by the liberals. I think a change is in order. The recession didn't start in 1981 with this administration."

"What the national administration has worked so hard to do is effect a substantial change in direction by the institution of policies that would reduce the size of government and slow down the increase in the cost of government."

On national defense issues, Hutchison places himself between the hawks and the doves. He says that while he did not approve of all of the actions of ex-Secretary of State Alexander Haig, he believes that Haig combined the best of both of two schools of thought in foreign policy: brinkmanship and détente.

Hutchison says he supports the nuclear freeze initiative on the November state ballot — but with reservations.

"It implies a mutual good faith on both sides," he says of the freeze. "But we've not seen a demonstration of that by the Soviets in reviewing their conduct over the last 40 years."

On energy: "My analysis tells me our demand over time will increase rather than decrease; therefore I don't think we can afford to categorically reject any energy alternative — solar, geothermal, or windpower. I think we should continue our efforts with nuclear power."

"The record of nuclear power on balance is pretty good."

On abortion: "It's an abhorrent thing by definition. However, as repugnant as it is, it is not the proper role of government as a matter of law to decide whether a woman can or cannot have an abortion."

However, in a recent debate he expressed his opposition to government funding for abortions.

Hutchison says he supports President Reagan's recent human rights certification of El Salvador, and supports continued U.S. involvement in the area because of what he said was the growing influence of Cuba and Nicaragua in the area.

And Dellums has won national attention as a vocal critic of successive administrations, a candidate for president at the Democratic National Convention in 1980, and as the force behind the Congressional Caucus, a left-leaning group known primarily for its alternative proposals to the budget and for its media attention.

He is known for his stumping and for his opposition to the nuclear arms race and the Reagan administration and the Carter and Nixon administrations, for that matter.

In short, Dellums is an anomaly in Congress, the most left leaning member of that body. At the point, an independent in everything but the party with whom he is affiliated.

His detractors, many of whom have been in the Hutchison bandwagon, say he is ineffective from the hapless '60s, or dangerous from the point of view of the party.

What does Dellums think of the election?

"I don't think I'm God's gift to the people," he said. "But I've tried to keep issues at the center of what I think people are beginning to understand."

But, he says, "I stand alone. I take no one with me."

Dellums insists that the election must be a referendum on the policies of the Reagan administration and says again that if the voters like Hutchison should vote for him.

But, he says, on one condition: that the airing of his views and the views of his supporters for 12 years with honor and dignity. He will engage as Hutchison has in sniping attacks at me and the institution. I'm not prepared to do that.

"This campaign must be decided on the issues and I'm still looking for it."

Dellums thinks Reagan's, and the liberal administration's military appropriations exceeded their necessary size and that certain weapons threaten to destabilize the rough parity of the United States and the Soviet Union.

Dellums says his top priority is "reducing nuclear war — with a view toward education."

"I'll challenge every weapons system to strike capability. The MX, the Pershing, the Trident II — at best they're destabilizing."

Dellums contends that arms control negotiations be approached realistically and that it is not a matter of whether the Soviets have an interest in themselves also.

Dellums says he has not engaged in the actions of other members of Congress.

"I was elected to advocate a set of ideas, not to be a kingmaker. I've got to influence in the hands of my constituents."

He was referring to the Dellums Executive Committee, a large group of community action groups, candidates and study issues for his endorsement.

Dellums became annoyed when asked about son's charges of ineffectiveness. "Ineffective?" "I could introduce easy bills. I could win votes."

"It's like in the Vietnam War years. They later vindicated. We're in the minority, but we're wrong."

Ceramicist Susan Adame

Want to watch wheel throwing?

ALBANY — Artist Susan Adame, owner of Adame Ceramics at 1251 Solano Ave., will be holding a public demonstration of wheel throwing and other pottery techniques on Oct. 29 and 30 from noon to 5 and other artists will be making pie plates, garlic and French butter keepers, as well as serving plates and planters. Her two kilns will be open for view-

Adame Ceramics opened in December, 1981 in what was Chelemados Market.

In the front of the studio many of Adame's creations are on sale. Like the design of the shop itself, the plates, bowls, and other pieces are influenced by her grandfather's extensive collection of Japanese art.

The large work space is full of racks of pieces in various stages of completion, and littered with hunks of clay and bowls of lead-free glaze.

Adame Ceramics rents out work space to other ceramists, some of whom will be participating in the demonstration.

Patrice Judd, a potter for fifteen years, is now working on primitive, subconsciously-rooted structures and by gazing at roof-tops, anthropological studies and games.

John Staple has been a potter since 1973, when he set up a studio in Chico, and is now working on sculptures that play to its limits while conveying a sense of the ingenuity inherent in all art.

Maria Ballister has a Masters of Fine Arts from Cal State Long Beach, has taught ceramics, and will be showing her sculptured tiles and wall pieces in February at the Center of the Arts in Torrance, California.

Supports Prop. 12.

As a car-riding citizen of the Bay Area I am concerned about the nuclear freeze proposition. It is imperative that we pass proposition No. 12 as a first step in eliminating dangerous nuclear weapons from our backyard. First we must limit the bombs produced and then we'll have less bombs and waste being transported.

Daily we are exposed to potentially lethal and devastating accidents involving transporting nuclear bombs and wastes on Highways 80, 17, and 580. Nuclear bombs are delivered to Alameda Naval Air Station by air and sea. They are taken to Concord Naval Weapons Station for maintenance and repair. Trucks containing nuclear weapons are unmarked. Although Lawrence Livermore Lab does not make bombs, it does the research and the designs for improved weapons. It is licensed to have 495 pounds of plutonium on its premises. Plutonium is so deadly that one pound of it can give cancer to every human being on earth. We are surrounded by facilities that will expand as the arms race continues. Let's pray that all the trucks, helicopters, and trains carrying plutonium have safe trips.

The increasing number of accidents involving transportation of chemical wastes should warn us to halt the transportation of weapons and wastes. We must stop producing more weapons. A first step is voting yes on proposition 12, for the nuclear freeze.

Judging judges

During the primary for Berkeley-Albany Municipal Court Judge, I was upset to find Julie Conger advertising herself with the slogan "The Only Woman in the Race." It seems to me that such a slogan really disqualifies this candidate for a position that requires making decisions "without regard to race, creed, color, or sex."

In particular, I don't like the veiled hint in the slogan that the election involves some sort of conspiracy to keep women out. Any qualified citizen, male or female, was free to run just by paying the filing fee. I also dislike the slogan's hostile and divisive implication that women dispense a better kind of justice in the courtroom than men.

By contrast, Booker Jackson, Conger's opponent now in the run-off, doesn't distribute leaflets asking people to vote for him because he's black. Along with many other Berkeley-Albany voters, I'd like to see more women running for public office and winning elections. But women shouldn't be rewarded at the ballot box for making a crude appeal to sexual prejudice.

Service clubs plan fund-raiser in E.C.

EL CERRITO — Two local service clubs are planning a dinner-auction for Saturday, Nov. 13, at the El Cerrito Community Center located at 7007 Mooser Lane.

Sponsored by the El Cerrito Rotary and Sororist Clubs, the fund-raiser will begin at 5:30 p.m. with a silent auction and no-host cocktail bar. A spaghetti dinner will follow at 6:30 p.m. with the live auction beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Members of the clubs are asking for donations to the auction, whose proceeds will be used to fund various community projects in El Cerrito.

Any merchant or resident who would like to make a donation should contact Linda Hahn at 234-2774 by Oct. 22.

Tickets for the event are $5, all inclusive and tax-deductible. Seating will be limited to 250 and ticket sales are increasing rapidly. For further information, contact Mary Blonetti at 235-0706 or Joan Statler at 525-1564.

A theater for the small fry

children to take part in the show.

"What I'm looking for is performers who can relate to kids and bring that out in them," she said. "We had no trouble finding the first six."

"This may become a forum for some of the local talent."

Adult theater is "too big and overwhelming," for children, Gorman said, "and in the end it doesn't mean too much to them."

She has brought Kidstuff down to child scale. Instead of being held in a huge theater, performances are in the Julia Morgan Theater "ballroom," which holds 350 people. Children sit on cushions on the floor, though there are chairs set up for parents who want them in the back of the room.

"I think parents are really looking for something to do at this time of day," Gorman said.

"The performers are first rate, so the parents can enjoy them too," she said, "and the performances are short in consideration of the kids' attention spans."

Gorman first saw this kind of children's theater when she lived in Los Angeles. She and her husband and son Ari, then three, became regular patrons. They loved it.

"When I came to Berkeley two years ago, after having seen this place in Los Angeles," she said, "I immediately saw there was very, very little going on for kids."

Starting a theater, she said, has been "on my mind ever since."

She finally had her chance, Gorman said, when she began working at the Julia Morgan Theater, helping organize the Bay Area Youth Theater after her son Ari, now 11, began performing there.

After she had worked there awhile, she said, the ballroom became available rent-free, making her Kidstuff dream possible.

Gorman, 42, was a speech pathologist in Berkeley in the '60s until she and her husband George, 41, moved to Los Angeles, where he was a zoology professor at UCLA. They moved back to the Thousand Oaks district of Berkeley two years ago, when her husband went back to school at UC-Berkeley's Boalt Hall law school. They have another son, Philip, 3.

Gorman said that although children in the audience are encouraged to take part in performances, the performers themselves are not children.

She said she hopes Kidstuff will give children "a sense of the excitement of live performance so they feel confident with it and enjoy the participation — and possibly want to create something on their own."

For information, call 527-4973.

Training set for bingo

ALBANY — The Albany Boosters Club is holding a training session Oct. 28 at 7 p.m. at the middle school to train parents and friends who would like to help run the bingo games slated to start Nov. 6.

This is a change from the date originally set. This will allow parents to be free to attend college/career night on Wednesday, Oct. 27.

If you have any questions regarding the training or the games, please call Bob Holye at 525-0421 (evenings) or 525-7131 (days).

School sets carnival

EL CERRITO — Harding School will hold its annual carnival on Saturday, Oct. 30.

Booths will be open from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. There will be games and food including hot dogs, hamburgers, salad, popcorn, cold drinks and coffee.

Tickets will sell five for $1. and may be used for food items or games. Chuckie Cheese will visit from 1 to 2 p.m.

All proceeds benefit Harding students. The school is located at Fairmount and Ashbury, El Cerrito.

Charlesworth gets medal

First Lt. Gregory S. Charlesworth, son of Alice Charlesworth of El Cerrito, has been decorated with the U.S. Air Force Commendation Medal at RAF Woodbridge, England.

The medal is awarded to those individuals who demonstrate outstanding achievement or meritorious service in the performance of their duties on behalf of the Air Force.

Charlesworth is a field maintenance officer with the 67th Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Squadron.

They like to bid over in England. Thus, the British commentator thought that six no-trump was a normal contract. Actually, it is a pretty good one. If hearts break 3-3 — a 35 percent chance — there are 12 tricks without the diamond finesse. Irrespective of the heart suit if East holds the diamond king, and it is not guarded three times, the slam will also roll in.

South wasn't pleased with the heart opening. It looked as if that suit was not going to break and East's drop of the six spot did nothing to dispel that thought. Anyway, South took his ace and continued with the nine of hearts while East completed the echo with his deuce.

South cashed the third top heart opening. People have been known to falcater.

Now South led dummy's jack of diamonds and let it ride. Lo and behold, the diamond finesse had worked for him.

South was about to repeat the finesse, when he paused to see that a little care would guard against a 4-1 diamond break.

He postponed a second diamond play while cashing all his clubs and the ace and king of spades.

The king of spades squeezed East. He had to come down to three cards, and of necessity one was the jack of hearts. A diamond had to go and a repeat diamond finesse gave South the rest of the tricks.
